AGENDA

LAST MEETING FOLLOW UP

The Coronavirus pandemic has created a transition from traditional learning to a remote setup. Educators and students are finding ways to continue the process of learning amidst the global pandemic.

NEW BUSINESS

According to statistics, synchronised teaching is not working out due to the difference in syllabus and non-availability of resources to every student/child in a household. Asynchronous teaching can be practised by assigning a package of curriculum for a week with different tasks and courses everyday which also helps the student learn at their own pace. Teachers can reach out to students that need additional help and help them stay on track with the curriculum. A lot of learning can be done at home. Students can maximise their learning by learning household chores.

AGENDA FOR NEXT MEETING

Educators can find ways to improve learning for students that do not come from affluent families as well. The courses can be modified at the department level strategically in order to make learning easy and conducive to the students and their families.

ADJOURNMENT

Meeting was adjourned at 2:38 PM by Sarah. The next team meeting will be at 6:00PM ON 28th March, 2022 in Gmeet.
